

ABSTRACT

A liquid crystal display device and a testing method thereof that is capable of accurately detecting a point defect existing in a liquid crystal display panel. In the method, scanning lines are scanned in a sequence directing from the low-order lines into the high-order lines, thereby detecting a defect from a test picture displayed on a liquid crystal display panel.

201502261440